

Child Exploitation Awareness Day

18th March 2023

National Child Exploitation Awareness Day is a time for organisations to raise awareness about all forms of exploitation. This includes modern slavery, criminal exploitation, sexual exploitation, and trafficking. The aim is to highlight and share good safeguarding practice and key areas for practice development linked to exploitation.

The theme for this year is: “Safeguarding is everyone’s business”. Everyone has a responsibility to prevent child abuse and ensure that all children are safe from harm.

In this briefing:

- NWG's Campaign for Child Exploitation Awareness day
- What is Child Exploitation, and signs and indicators
- The importance of language
- Training Opportunities
- Local Services available for children who may be at risk
- Where to find the Hillingdon Youth Bus and when during the week of 13th-17th march
- Resources to support safeguarding practice

Think twice, think abuse. If you see something, say something.
Think, spot and speak out about exploitation of children.

The National Working Group (NWG) Network's 'Think Twice, Think Abuse' initiative is aimed at encouraging members of the community to think about exploitation and say something if you see something.

Children can be exploited anywhere and the community can help to inform local councils, police and other agencies about what is happening in public spaces. It is everyone's responsibility to speak out if they are worried that a child or young person may be a victim of sexual exploitation.

What is Child Exploitation?

Child exploitation is a type of child abuse, that usually happens outside of the family home. It occurs when an individual or group (this may be adults or other children) takes advantage of a power imbalance to manipulate a child into drug trafficking such as county lines, carrying weapon, forced into violent situations and/or sexual activity. It can happen in person or online.

A child that is being exploited may be given things such as drugs, money, gifts, accommodation, status and affection. They are often tricked into believing that they are friends or in a consensual relationship. They are unlikely to realise or understand that they are being abused.

Signs and Indicators

- Going missing for periods, or staying out late.
- Spending time with people older than them
- Missing school or seeing a drop in performance
- Change in behaviour - new concerning behaviours, aggressive behaviours or increasingly withdrawn.
- Spending more time online - unusually secretive about it
- Wearing clothes or accessories showing gang colours or symbols
- Unexplained injuries
- New clothes/jewellery or new access to money
- New phone or multiple phones

Language

The language that we use to talk about children is important to remind us that children are victims of exploitation. The Children's Society have created this useful guidance about appropriate language to use when speaking about or engaging with children that are at risk of exploitation or who have been exploited.
